The key feature of the story is its use of multiple perspectives. The story shows three different people giving different versions of the same event. They claim responsibility for the exact same murder, and their stories contradict each other. This shows that truth changes depending on who is telling the story.

Q2

The central theme is that there is no single "absolute truth". Every person changes the reality based on their own self-interest, honor, & self-deception.

Q3

The story uses different testimonies from different characters. Since their statements contradict each other, there is no main narrator to tell the reader what actually happened, which forces the reader to only see the subjective truth of each character.

Q4.

The biggest example is the murder of the samurai itself. The robber says he killed the samurai in a fair fight with his 23rd stroke. The wife says he killed her husband out of shame. Meanwhile, the samurai's spirit says he committed suicide with his 49th small sword.

Q5.

The story shows that human memory & perception become unreliable when a person's ego or honor is in danger. Characters change their memories to make themselves look like heroes or honorable victims.

Q6.

The samurai spirit gives another version of the event, but it still does not reveal the definite truth.

Q7.

It teaches us that human morality is very complex because characters value their own pride & reputation much more than the actual truth. It highlights how self-presentation is deeply rooted in human nature.

Q8.

The main challenge for the reader is that there is no clear or correct answer about who actually committed the murder. The reader has to use critical thinking and act as a judge to solve the mystery.

Q9

The main section of the story is the "Confessions" of the three main characters (Tajomaru, the wife and the Samurai), because this is where the real conflict & mystery begins.

1) Beginning $\Rightarrow$ Characters & Situation 2) Middle $\Rightarrow$ Develop the Conflict event 3) Ending $\Rightarrow$ Bring the story to conclusion

Q10.

1) Honesty, 2) Integrity, 3) Responsibility, 4) Respect, 5) Compassion
6) Fairness, 7) Courage, 8) Humility, 9) Tolerance, 10) Accountability.
